human problems.
Where most writers
over-simplify, he insists on the principle of multiple and
interlocking causation.
And where most assume that "facts

themselves," he makes it clear that
facts are mere
ventriloquists'
dummies, and can be made to justify any course of action that appeals to the socially conditioned passions of the individuals concerned. These two truths are sufficiently obvious; but they are seldom recognized, for the good reason that they are very depressing. To recognize the first truth is to recognize the fact that there are no panaceas and that therefore most of the golden promises made by political reformers and revolutionaries are illusory. And to recognize the truth that facts do not speak for themselves, but only as man's socially conditioned passions dictate, is to

and depends upon
acts of the conscious or subconscious will.

Thus, the fallacies
underlying the
propaganda of racial hatred are not
recognized because,
as Dr. Montagu points
out, most people have a desire to act
aggressively, and the members of other
ethnic groups are

convenient victims,
whom one may attack
with a good conscience. This desire to act
aggressively has its origins in the largely unavoidable
frustrations imposed
upon the individual by
the processes of early
education and later
adjustments to the social environment.

Dr. Montagu might have added that aggressiveness pays a higher dividend in emotional satisfaction than does coöperation.

Coöperation may produce a mild emotional glow; but the indulgence of aggressivness can be the equivalent of a drinking bout or

has so penetratingly

Montagu says very little, except that they

education. But what process? It is to be
